FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS:

Overview

1. This matter involves a petition to vacate an approximately 9582-square-foot stretch of public right-of-way at a portion of 232nd Ave NE near Redmond. The Department of Local Services, Road Services Division (Roads), supports vacation. After holding a September 20 public hearing on behalf of the Council, taking witness testimony and observing demeanor, studying the exhibits entered into evidence, and considering party arguments and the relevant law, we strongly recommend against vacation.

Evidence

2. Leslie Drake provided the history of the petition and its evolution. She asserted that, even given the walking trail the currently crosses it, the right-of-way is useless to the County transportation system of the future and should be vacated.
3. Hyunchul Yi, a petitioner, asserted that he had been harassed and bullied by the neighbors and excluded from the community. He accused the neighbors of destroying nature to build a path and screaming at him. See also Ex. A11.
4. Yongjun Lee, the other petitioner, explained his history with the property. He thinks the neighbors are trying to force them out and treating them poorly. Neighbors have shouted at them from the trail, removed his cones blocking off the driveway, and come up to their house. They have asked to join the community and been rejected multiple times. He does not want the neighbors to pass by on the public right-of-way. He is confident there are no easements on his property. See also Ex. A1.
5. The first neighbor to testify, William Trippett, opined that there was a right-of-way of necessity across the southern portion of Petitioners' property. That path became the "Lewis Loop" that has been continuously traversed for 40 years. Petitioners have blocked both off, forcing the community to re-route the trail over the public right-of-way. See also Ex. P1 at 004-05.
6. Mark Galbraith explained the community's use of the pedestrian/bike trail along the easement over what is now the Petitioners' property to Chet Lewis's parcel. After Petitioners cut off access, the community had to reroute the trail. He lives across public right-of-way from Petitioners. Petitioners approached him to join in the vacation, so that together they could cut off the entire right-of-way and thus the rerouted trail.¹ He declined, seeing the benefit in a community walking trail. See also Ex. P4.
7. Ms. Stutzman described the communities' efforts to relocate the historic trail across the edge of Petitioners' property, to accommodate Petitioners' objection to the historic use. She mapped the previous and new paths. See also Ex. P3. She is the caretaker of the neighborhood Facebook group; neither Mr. Lee nor Mr. Yi submitted a request to join; they would be welcome to join.
8. Scott Berkum described efforts to accommodate Petitioners. Because they are fairly isolated in the woods, he has met most of his neighbors from walking the trail. He too is against vacation.
9. Jim Kirschner described conversations with Petitioners to try to reconcile the situation. He suggested a reroute of the trail that would go through less of Petitioners' property, but Petitioners refused, so they shifted the trail to the County right-of-way. He wished they had had a Korean interpreter present to facilitate those conversations.

10. Chet Lewis explained the community’s continuous use of the Lewis Loop for 40 years. That easement, across a portion of Petitioners’ property, is his only access to the water meter. Because Petitioners have blocked it off, he would now need to trek a mile to the water meter, and he is 87 years old.
11. We accepted into the record 22 exhibits submitted by Roads, 12 from Petitioners, and six from the public. Except as provided below, we incorporate the facts set forth in Roads’ report and in proposed ordinance no. 2023-0248. That report, and a map showing the area to be vacated and the vicinity of the proposed vacation, are in the hearing record and will be attached to the copies of our recommendation submitted to Council. Exs. D1 at 001-06, D13.

Overarching Thoughts

12. This neighborhood dispute is an unfortunate situation for everyone. It could benefit from mediation, especially with a Korean language interpreter to avoid miscommunication. Some of what Petitioners are complaining about—screaming, dog poop, moving garbage cans, etc.—are unacceptable no matter what. However, part of who is at fault relates to a legal dispute over easements.
13. Petitioners want everyone to follow the law; that makes sense. However, who has the law on their side law, when it comes to property rights, is not so clear. If we are understanding Petitioners’ argument, when they purchased the property their title showed no easements across their property. But recorded easements are not the only type of easements. The neighbors have demonstrated a colorable claim that there may be an easement of necessity, or an implied easement, or a prescriptive easement across some portion of the Petitioners’ property. Thus, it may be that Petitioners purchased a property already burdened by the right of a particular parcel owner (like Mr. Lewis) or other neighbors to traverse a portion of Petitioners’ property.
14. We are not in a position to make a ruling on that; that would be the job of the superior court via Petitioners or the neighbors filing a quiet title action if the parties cannot reach an agreement. Until the parties work out some sort of binding agreement or until the facts and law are established by a court, the parties’ rights will likely remain fuzzy. Lack of clarity is often a recipe for conflict. If it turns out that Mr. Lewis and/or others have a right to cross a portion of Petitioners’ property, “Follow the law!” would mean, “Hey, Mr. Lee and Mr. Yi, stop illegally trying to block off established easements.” Conversely, if it turns out there are no easements anywhere on Petitioners’ property, “Follow the law!” would mean “Hey, neighbors, stay off of Petitioners’ private property.”
15. If Petitioners and at least some of their neighbors are interested in trying to resolve their dispute amicably, we can try arranging for mediation. But today we sit not as a community dispute resolver but essentially as a judge applying the legal standards controlling vacations.

Analysis

16. Chapter RCW 36.87 sets the general framework for county road vacations, augmented by KCC chapter 14.40. There are at least four somewhat interrelated inquiries. The first two relate to whether vacation is warranted: is the [1] road useless to the road system and [2] would vacation benefit the public? If the answers to these are both yes, the third and fourth relate to compensation: [3] what is the appraised (or perhaps assessed) value of the right-of-way, and [4] how should this number be adjusted to capture avoided County costs? We analyze each of those below.
17. No one is arguing that [1] the road is useful to the County road system. It is not currently built out as a street, nor is there any expectation that it might in the future be built out as an actual street. Uselessness to the road system is met.
18. However, Petitioners still have the burden to show that [2] “the public will be benefitted by its vacation and abandonment.” RCW 36.87.020. While denial is mandatory (“shall not” vacate) where a petitioner fails to make that showing, approval is discretionary where a petitioner shows uselessness to the road system and public benefit (“may vacate”). RCW 36.87.060(1) (emphasis added). In this case the question of public benefit revolves around a public trail.
19. In a recent recommendation in vacation petition V-2727,² we pointed to language in KCC 14.40.0104.B.4 that the road engineer needs to study “Whether it is advisable to preserve all or a portion of the right of way for the county transportation system of the future.” We explained that “transportation system” is a broader term than “road system” and that trails are a part of the County’s transportation system but not of its road system. Over Roads’ objection we found that, due to public trail potential, vacation was not in the public interest. We recommended against vacation; Council agreed with our recommendation and denied the petition.
20. In response, as part of a package of other code amendments, the Executive proposed to change “county transportation system of the future” to “county road system of the future.” However, the Council rejected that change. As a councilmember who sponsored the amendment explained it:

The current code uses the word “transportation”, as one of the purposes, for which you could deny a road vacation. One reason to deny is to use it for a future transportation purpose. That has been interpreted in the past to include trails. If in the process of doing this amendment, that word got replaced in favor of “roads” that means we could only deny if we were keeping the land for the purposes of a road, not a trail. The staff in the Exec branch proposed the change to conform with state law. We don't have to conform[]]. I prefer to continue to use the word "transportation" to have the ability to include trails if we choose.

The amendment was adopted unanimously, signaling the Council's continuing commitment to trails.

21. The case against vacation is even stronger here than in previous petitions involving trails.
22. First, in the V-2727 petition described above, the public did not currently use that particular stretch of right-of-way as a trail. There was only the potential to use that right-of-way if the alternative, preferred trail alignment was not built out. That potential trail use was sufficient for us and the Council to reject the vacation petition. Here the public already uses part of that public right-of-way as a trail, re-routing it there after Petitioners objected to the trail's historic alignment across a portion of their property.
23. Second, in previous petitions, the negative impacts on public use were an incidental outcome of vacation. For example, a property owner discovers that part of their house was inadvertently built into a public right-of-way; they seek vacation to legalize their home. Where neighbors object that this would cut off a potential trail, we have recommended in favor of vacation, but only where the petitioner creates a public right-of-way elsewhere on their property to make up for the vacated portion.
24. Here, the neighbors rerouted the historic "Lewis Loop" to the public right-of-way because Petitioners objected to the historic alignment across a portion of their property. Petitioners' vacation is designed to stop the public from walking the public right-of-way. Petitioners even attempted to lobby the Galbraiths to join their petition, so together they could completely block off the entire public right-of-way and thus the rerouted trail. Again, not only are Petitioners not offering a compensating trail somewhere else along their property, the reason the Lewis Loop was shortened and rerouted through the public right-of-way (see exhibit P3 at 002) was to accommodate Petitioners' demand that people stop traveling on any portion of Petitioners' property.
25. It is also not so clear how vacation would solve the problem. As we understood the testimony, the neighbors attempted to find a solution to continue walking along the south and east edge of petitioner's property to avoid the area near petitioner's home, but petitioners refused. Thus, the neighbors agreed to shorten the Lewis Loop to avoid a conflict with Petitioners, bypassing Petitioners' property entirely and constructing a trail on the public right-of-way. Vacation could even make the conflict worse, incentivizing the neighbors to push their potential rights to walk across those portions of Petitioners' property, an outcome Petitioners would not want.
26. Petitioners come nowhere close to showing that the public will benefit by vacating and abandoning the subject right-of-way. We strongly recommend against vacation.
27. If the Council disagrees and finds vacation appropriate, we calculate compensation by [3] starting with the increase in property values the receiving parcel will garner from the extra square footage the (formerly) public right-of-way area adds to the parcel; this figure is generated by the Assessor. However, that is only the starting point, because [4] State and County law allow local legislative branches to adjust the appraised value to reflect the expected value to the public from avoided liability risk, eliminated management costs, and jettisoned maintenance costs, along with increased property taxes. RCW 36.87.070; KCC 14.40.020.A.1.

28. Performance, Strategy, and Budget created a model for calculating these adjustments, updated annually. Roads then applies those figures to a given parcel, which here would result in a required payment of $3746. Ex. 9. Vacation would need to be made contingent on Petitioners' payment of that amount within 90 days of Council takes final action on the ordinance.

RECOMMENDATION.

We recommend that Council deny the petition.

NOTICE OF RIGHT TO APPEAL

A person appeals an Examiner recommendation by following the steps described in KCC 20.22.230 and providing copies of the appeal statement to the Examiner and to any named parties listed on the front page of the Examiner's recommendation. Please consult KCC 20.22.230 for exact requirements.

Prior to the close of business (4:30 p.m.) on October 27, 2023, either send an electronic copy of the appeal statement to Clerk.Council@kingcounty.gov or ensure that a paper copy of the appeal statement is delivered to the Clerk of the Council's Office, Room 1200, King County Courthouse, 516 Third Avenue, Seattle, Washington 98104. Prior mailing is not sufficient if the Clerk does not actually receive the appeal within the applicable time period.

Unless the appeal requirements of KCC 20.22.230 are met, the Clerk of the Council will place on the agenda of the next available Council meeting a proposed ordinance implementing the Examiner's recommended action.

If the appeal requirements of KCC 20.22.230 are met, the Examiner will notify parties and interested persons and will provide information about “next steps.”
