Ohio State's Meyer says he is stepping away from coaching

COLLEGE FOOTBALL

Buckeyes coach cites health, says he will retire after Rose Bowl

The Associated Press
COLUMBUS, Ohio — As Urban Meyer walked off the field after Ohio State routed Michigan, he was pondering his future and when to make a decision about when to call it quits.

The 54-year-old Meyer, in fact, had been thinking about retiring since the middle of last season.

The pain from headaches caused by an aneurysm cyst in his brain had grown worse this season. Off-the-field issues, including a three-game suspension for mismanagement of an assistant coach accused of domestic violence, had worn on him. And an ideal sponsor just happened to already be in place in the person of Ryan Day, his 39-year-old offensive coordinator.

On Tuesday, two days after the Buckeyes beat Northwestern to earn a second consecutive Big Ten championship, Meyer announced he was stepping down after the Rose Bowl on Jan. 1 and likely would never coach again.

"The decision was a result of cumulative events," Meyer said during a post-game news conference. "And health number one. The fact that we have an elite coach on our staff is the fact that our program is very healthy. We've recruited very well. All played a significant role."

Michael Conroy • THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Ohio State coach Urban Meyer is 82-9 as Buckeyes coach and overall has won three national championships.

Meyer is leaving at the top of his profession after three national championships in a career spanning three decades, the last seven years at Ohio State, where he has an 82-9 record.

He had shown obvious effects of being in pain on the sideline this season, leading to questions about his future. Meyer explained that the headaches became severe last season during Ohio State's game at Penn State and have become a persistent problem this season.

"The style of coaching I've done for 33 years is very intense, very demanding. I tried to delegate more and CEO and the product started to feel...," he said, not finishing his thought. "I didn't feel I was doing right by our players and by Gene (Smith, the athletic director)."

Meyer said leaving would have been more difficult if the program wasn't healthy. The Buckeyes are 12-1 and Meyer said he felt good about his replacement. Day will take over as the 25th coach of the storied program where Meyer won a national title in 2014 after two at Florida (2006, 2008).

"You want to hand it off to someone who could make it stronger," Meyer said.

It was Day who led the Buckeyes when Meyer was suspended before the season opener over his role in the handling of now-fired assistant Zach Smith, who was accused by his ex-wife of domestic abuse. Meyer said he knew about the allegations against Smith — grandson of former Ohio State coach Earle Bruce — but wasn't sure they were true and kept Smith on staff because no criminal charges were filed. The university cited that lapse in investigating Meyer after an investigation.

NOTES

- Maryland hired Alabama offensive coordinator Mike Lockley, a former Teraps offensive coordinator. Lockley will take over after a season defined by tragedy and turmoil. Offensive line coach Jordan McCardell, in June of last season he suffered during an off-season workout, and in the wake of his death case, allegations of bullying and intimidation by coach DJ Darkin and one of his assistants.
- Durkin spent more than two months as administrative leave while independent investigations were conducted into McCardell's death and the culture surrounding the team. Durkin was reinstated Oct. 4, a decision that prompted widespread outrage and protests by players. University President Wallace Loh fired Durkin the next day.
- Auburn quarterback Jarrett Stidham is skipping his senior season to enter the NFL draft.
- Former Clemson starting quarterback Kelly Bryant says he'll play his final season at Clemson.
