Clerk 11/19/2004

AN ORDINANCE adopting the 2005 Annual Budget and making appropriations for the operation of county agencies and departments and capital improvements for the fiscal year beginning January 1, 2005, and ending December 31, 2005.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COUNCIL OF KING COUNTY:

SECTION 1. Findings. The council hereby makes the following findings of fact:

A. King County government has the responsibility to provide a variety of services to all residents of the county. These include: regional services, such as public safety, criminal justice, public health, wastewater treatment and public transportation; subregional services through contracts with several suburban cities for police protection, animal control and health and human services; and local services to unincorporated areas, such as county sheriff protection, roads, surface water management, local parks and land use regulation. To accomplish these tasks, the council has adopted a 2005 budget totaling $3.4 billion, of which $2.9 billion is in dedicated funds that must be used for specific purposes and $539 million is in the general fund which can be used for discretionary purposes, including public safety.

B. The metropolitan King County council works throughout the year to bring down the cost of government as its policy, regional and budget committees perform their oversight and policymaking roles. The 2005 budget reflects four years of council policy direction and coordination that have shifted the paradigm in criminal justice spending, implemented best business practices and initiated strategic analysis of technology projects. As a consequence, the county is able to maintain a network of mandated services and needed discretionary services for the most fragile members of our society, while saving money and improving outcomes.

C. In the past four years, the council has cut over $100 million from the general fund. The council recognizes that the county's general fund will continue to face a significant annual structural gap for the foreseeable future. The council has adopted limits on property taxes that have been approved by voters by initiative and have significantly limited revenue growth. While revenue growth is expected to recover somewhat as the economy recovers, with current projections of revenues growing less than three percent and expenditures historically growing over five percent, this leads to a recurring annual general fund shortfall of about $15 million. The initiatives and the policies that the council has set in place during the last four years are expected to reduce the growth of expenditures and thereby reduce this structural gap. The executive's and the council's 2005 work programs include further refined analysis of when and by how much the county can expect to see these reductions materialize.

D. The county has already seen savings result from the implementation of the council's policies and initiatives. These savings have allowed the council to build one-time reserves that can be used to mitigate the impact of the general fund structural gap in 2006 and 2007. In addition, the one-time reserves will help the county to meet expected future budget needs for items such as the cost of health care and continued investments in technology.

E. For this 2005 budget the council has performed its review of the executive proposed budget through the work of three budget panels. These panels have been guided in prioritizing competing needs by the long-range policies adopted by the council over the past four years, as well as by the findings of the budget advisory task force and the King County commission on governance, both which urged controls on the growth of criminal justice agency costs, strategic investment in technology and the need to complete annexation or incorporation of the urban unincorporated areas of the county. The 2005 budget panels have also been informed by the work of the county's task force on regional human services and the health advisory task force.

F. The county remains responsible for providing local services to 352,000 residents of the unincorporated areas of the county, including 216,000 residents living in urban unincorporated areas. This 2005 budget continues funding of the county's annexation initiative which is designed to encourage annexation or incorporation of the urban unincorporated areas, as envisioned by the Growth Management Act and the Countywide Planning Policies. Through Motion 12018, the council adopted a policy framework and 2005 work program for the annexation initiative. The potential impact of annexations and incorporations on county programs, revenues and expenditures was discussed in all three budget panels. Analysis of these impacts will continue throughout 2005.

G. The healthy and safe communities panel reviewed the changes that have occurred in the county's criminal justice system through the implementation of the juvenile justice operational master plan and the adult justice operational master plan with the intention of increasing the alternatives to incarceration that are part of both plans.

H. Through Ordinance 13916, which created the juvenile justice operational master plan and Ordinance 14430, which created the adult justice operational master plan, the council has met its first priority to protect public safety while freeing up jail space and saving money through such alternatives as drug court, mental health court and driver relicensing programs, emphasizing prevention over detention and reinvesting funds in human service programs that keep people out of the system and discourage recidivism. This paradigm shift has successfully slowed the growth of criminal justice spending. For example, the adult jail population in 2004 is down twenty-five percent from its level in 2000 and the juvenile detention population is down forty-five percent, with no increase in crime.

I. In line with a study now being conducted by the National Center for State Courts, this budget calls for a study of the feasibility of consolidating the administrative duties of the superior court, the district court and the department of judicial administration, in order to eliminate duplication and streamline processes, thereby reducing costs while increasing service for citizens.

J. In the 2004 budget, the council directed the criminal justice agencies to review and improve the efficiency of the felony case processing system. This has resulted in nearly $500,000 in savings in the prosecuting attorney and public defender budgets by filing more cases as city misdemeanors rather than as more expensive county felonies. This reduces the county's costs while also speeding the punishment of low-level offenders.

K. The council has found operational master plans to be a useful tool for framing strategic and budgetary decisions regarding specific county agencies. In past years, the council has directed the development of operational master plans for the adult and juvenile justice systems and the district court. Declining revenues, increasing needs and limited understanding of best practices in public health have prompted the council to initiate a major review and potential overhaul of this mandated government function. This budget calls for an operational master plan for public health that examines how the county can best meet its responsibilities in light of changing needs, resources and practices in the public health field.

L. This budget continues to reflect the council's framework policies for human services, adopted by Ordinance 13629, providing for those health and human services not covered by state and federal sources that reduce other governmental and social costs, especially related to rehabilitation of offenders and assistance for the elderly and youth in need. For example, this budget implements a broad-based community plan to end homelessness in King County over the next ten years and employs reserves in the veterans fund to help develop housing for homeless veterans, as a model for the kind of housing and service programs recommended in the ten-year plan.

M. This budget allows the sheriff to convert federal funding the county has received for the Green River homicide investigation to other important programs such as the comparison of DNA evidence from unsolved homicides against state and national crime databases and training of commissioned law enforcement officers to enhance their effectiveness as first responders to natural or man-made disasters.

N. This budget achieves greater efficiencies and effectiveness in the county's employment and training programs by transferring the King County jobs initiative from the office of business relations and economic development to the department of community and human services, which already manages three other job training programs. This budget expands programs to aid community corrections programs to train offenders coming out of jail, targeting low-income disadvantaged adults in the White Center area.

O. The leadership and strategic investments panel reviewed the budgets of general government operating agencies and conducted a comprehensive analysis of technology and capital facilities investments.

P. The council established a policy framework to improve transparency and accountability in the funding and management of technology projects and to ensure that the county makes sound investments. In 2005, the county will invest $33.7 million in fifty-eight technology projects. Each project was reviewed to ensure it has a solid business case to justify the project on the basis of the council's goals of efficiency, accountability, public access, customer service and risk management. In particular, efficiency projects were examined to ensure that they pay for themselves over time. Finally, each project was reviewed to ensure that a business case is in place before the project is implemented.

Q. Using this framework, the council identified four projects that require additional scrutiny by the council. These projects are: the benefit health information project; the accountable business transformation project; the jail health electronic medical record project; and the electronic court records automated indexing project. In each case, the council has requested that a business case be prepared for council approval before implementing the project. Management of these projects will be improved by the addition of a project manager to the department of executive services to help implement large and complex technology projects.

R. The council looked for ways to reduce the cost of county government and county overhead rates. This budget reduces larger-than-needed surpluses in the employee benefits fund and the facilities management fund. This budget reduces increases in the technology services operating budget, pending the outcome of an organizational study of the county's information technology systems that should result in greater efficiencies in the management of those systems. This budget found $425,000 in efficiencies in general government capital projects by carefully scrutinizing funding requests.

S. The council set policy direction in a number of areas and has developed important work plans for 2005. The council provided direction for a new organizational model for information technology functions based on cost efficiency. In 2005 the council will carefully monitor savings from improved management of county telecommunications contracts. The council will also follow closely the implementation of the network infrastructure optimization project, which has the potential to reduce telecommunications service costs by merging the county's separate voice and data lines.

T. The healthy environment and mobility panel carefully scrutinized the county's enterprise funds and large capital construction projects, to make sure ratepayers get the best deal possible from the agencies responsible for protecting the environment, treating wastewater, managing solid waste and maintaining King County's public transit and county road system.

U. The council recognizes the needs of King County citizens for affordable transportation alternatives to single occupancy vehicles and the needs of youth for convenient and reliable school transportation. This budget maintains transit fares and all pass prices at the same level as in 2002 through 2004 while recognizing that operating cost increases will eventually require fare increases. In addition, this budget includes appropriations sufficient to maintain current transit service levels, including critical routes that are used by students.

V. This budget recognizes that the Elliott Bay Water Taxi has strong ridership and fare box recovery and should be maintained in 2005 while the county continues to explore options for continued or expanded waterborne transit services. This budget funds the Elliott Bay Water Taxi for the period April 15 through September 30.

W. This budget continues the scaling back of roads capital improvement projects in the wake of the loss of the local vehicle license fee due to voter approval of Initiative 776. The council dramatically revised the 2004 and six-year capital improvement plans in June 2004. Projects that address capacity needs must wait until either a new funding source is identified or existing revenues become available beyond the 2005-2010 span of the six-year plan.

X. To provide stability and certainty for wastewater users, this budget is based on a monthly wastewater service rate of $25.60 with the intent that that rate will remain in place for two years. In addition, the wastewater capital program is based on a $34.05 per month capacity charge with the intent to maintain that rate for three years.

Y. As the county proceeds with construction of a third wastewater treatment plant in response to the needs identified by the 2001 regional wastewater services plan, this budget includes provisions for the kind of independent monitoring and oversight that has proven to be a valuable tool on other major county capital projects. These provisions call for new program reporting and cost-monitoring formats to be developed cooperatively with the executive, so that the council may have the appropriate tools with which it can provide oversight on this $1.5 billion project.

Z. While the council remains committed to the concept of reclaimed water, this budget cancels the Sammamish Valley water reuse project, saving $10 million. These resources can better be used for the water reuse facility that is part of the Brightwater plant that will yield up to 36 million gallons per day of reclaimed water when the plant comes on line in 2010. The Brightwater reuse facility is the most cost effective, efficient and environmentally sound alternative to supply reclaimed water to the Sammamish Valley.

AA. This budget calls for an innovative use of interlocal agreements to provide funding for the county's groundwater protection program. The program will coordinate the efforts of the county, cities and utilities to protect and maintain the quality and quantity of groundwater. The program will also provide a consistent groundwater management strategy, involving the local groundwater protection committees.

BB. This budget supports King County's commitment to Harborview Medical Center with strategic infrastructure improvements and equipment acquisitions and appropriation of voter-approved bond revenues to support a new multipurpose facility at 9th and Jefferson in Seattle as well as facility improvements at the inpatient expansion building.

CC. The state Growth Management Act requires King County to review and update its regulations to protect critical areas, which the council has accomplished through Ordinances 15051, 15052 and 15053. This budget implements additional measures that help ensure accountability, accessibility and ease of use by property owners. These include:

1. A new consolidated review for single family residential development that unites required reviews for siting a new home into a single package for a predictable price;
2. Staffing changes in the water and land resources division of the department of natural resources and parks to help the county better assist property owners in development of rural stewardship plans, farm plans and forest management plans that qualify them for flexible application of new critical areas standards. These staffing changes are part of a more comprehensive reorganization plan due in 2005;
3. Two outreach staff in the department of development and environmental services who can meet informally with rural landowners about new critical areas standards and help owners make informed decisions, without an hourly charge; and
4. A proviso to require the department of development and environmental services to monitor its permit efficiency and conduct customer-satisfaction interviews with permit applicants, as earlier recommended by the King County auditor and by citizens in public testimony and to report the results of the interviews to the auditor and council.

DD. This budget implements Ordinance 15028, the council's 2004 update to the King County Comprehensive Plan, with funds to develop a rural economic development strategy. This strategy is critical to help protect the character of our rural areas, while encouraging appropriate economic development opportunities.

EE. This budget finds that careful fiscal oversight requires completion of an analysis of the county's transfer system capacity and future needs in connection with solid waste export planning before funding for improvements at three county transfer stations is released.

FF. By Ordinance 14509 the council established parks and open space policies and funding priorities that preserve the county's commitment to parks and recreation in King County. Consistent with those policies, this budget adopts a parks capital improvement program (CIP) that supports the acquisition, development and rehabilitation of regional and rural parks, trails and recreational facilities. The council continues the transition begun in 2002 to emphasize regional park assets and limit local service to rural areas where the county is the primary service provider and to reduce dependence on limited general fund revenues. The council is adopting proposed projects that include revenue-generating and entrepreneurial efforts. The proposed CIP also includes regional trail development and open space acquisition projects. Finally, the increased operating and maintenance costs associated with these regional trail and open space projects is supported by the parks operating levy passed by voters in May 2003.

GG. The metropolitan King County council has determined that both mandatory duties and discretionary services for the most fragile members of our society are at the heart of a regional system of governance. It is the intent of the council that its policies be implemented through the 2005 King County budget.

SECTION 2. Effect of proviso or expenditure restriction veto.

It is hereby declared to be the legislative intent of the council that a veto of any proviso or expenditure restriction that conditions the expenditure of a stated dollar amount or the use of FTE authority upon the performance of a specific action by an agency shall thereby reduce the appropriation authority to that agency by the stated dollar or FTE amount.
