AN ORDINANCE creating an equity, civil rights and social justice commission; establishing its purpose, responsibilities and composition; adding a new chapter to K.C.C. PREAMBLE:

In 2008, the King County executive launched the King County Equity and Social Justice Initiative. The executive and departments made commitments to advance equity in policies and decision-making, organizational practices and engagement with communities.

On October 20, 2010, Ordinance 16948, also referred to as the Equity and Social Justice Ordinance, was enacted, moving equity and social justice from an initiative to an integrated effort that intentionally applies the countywide strategic plan's principle of "fair and just" in all the county does in order to achieve equitable opportunities for people and communities.

Established on January 1, 2015, the office of equity and social justice works hand-in-hand with the equity and social justice interbranch team, operations cabinet and cabinet to support the work of all county employees and agencies. The office also serves as the coordinator of key county efforts to advance equity and social justice in the organization and community. Although there is now an office of equity and social justice, every county agency and employee is still ultimately responsible for advancing and being accountable for equity and social justice activities and deliverables.

The 2016-2022 Equity and Social Justice Strategic Plan is a blueprint for change, mutually created by county employees and community partners. The plan defines bodies of work at the department, agency and countywide levels. Strategies and actions include integrating equity into policy work through a pro-equity policy agenda and into county practices and systems through six goal areas.

The current commitment to equity and social justice moves the county beyond practices that have historically been designed to react to problems and crises in communities after they arise.

The county's primary equity and social justice strategies are to invest upstream and where needs are greatest, in community partnerships, and in employees, with transparent and accountable leadership.

Community participation and accountability are central to the success of King County's equity and social justice work. Oversight and partnership with community to ensure equitable outcomes are key in existing bodies of work plus in emerging issues.

King County's civil rights commission was established in 1976 to serve in an advisory capacity to the county executive and the council on matters concerning affirmative action, disability access, equal employment opportunity, contract compliance, fair housing, minority/woman business and public accommodations to ensure the consistent application of all county ordinances, rules and regulations concerning those programs.

The office of civil rights investigates and resolves discrimination complaints under King County antidiscrimination ordinances as codified in K.C.C. chapters 12.17, 12.18, 12.20 and 12.22.

In January 2017, funding for the office of civil rights was integrated into the office of equity and social justice, providing new opportunities to infuse equity and social justice recommendations post investigations and support policies and practices that prevent discrimination. Joining equity, civil rights and social justice improves the county's service to and work with low-income communities, communities of color and immigrants and refugees.
